RUSSIAN ARMY IN TRAP

London Reports That Tenth Army is in Perilous Position—Artillery
Battles Mark Western Fighting.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, Feb. 23.—The bombardment of Rheims reported yesterday evening was extremely violent. It lasted for a first period of six hours, followed by a period of five hours. Fifteen hundred shells were dropped into the town. What remains of the cathedral was made a special target and suffered seriously. The interior of the vaulted roof which had resisted until now, was burst. About twenty houses were fired and twenty civilians killed.

British Trench Destroyed.
London, Feb. 23.—The British semi-weekly report on the progress of the fighting on the continent was given out today and reads as follows: "The enemy continues to show considerable activity. In the neighborhood of Ypres several attacks and counter attacks have occurred. At six o'clock in the morning, Feb. 21, the enemy executed an elaborate series of mines which were blown up of our trenches. A new line was prepared a short distance from the rear and immediately occupied. Any attempt at further progress have been completely frustrated.

"Near Givenchy, our infantry, after a successful bombardment, captured a trench of the enemy and after it up an attempted attack by the enemy along La Bassée canal was easily repulsed by our artillery.

"To the south of the river Lys there has been an increase in artillery and the fire in the trenches showed marked superiority. Along the remainder of our front there has been nothing more than artillery duels. The thick weather has handicapped the work of aircraft.

New Artillery Battles.
Artillery engagements have been the distinguishing feature of activity along the western battle front during the past 24 hours, with the French claiming the destruction of a heavy German gun and the Germans admitting that the city of Rheims again has been violently bombed.

The only recent activity in the air has been provided by a single Zeppelin which dropped bombs on Calais yesterday, while the only incident of note in connection with the submarine blockade has been the capture of the Russian submarine, the 'L' 15, off the coast of the English Channel, from New York February 13.

Nothing so far has been heard in England of the two German submarines, the 'U' 19 and 'U' 20, concerning whose safety the Germans are anxious.

Russian Army at Bay.
The Russian tenth army which, according to an official report by Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, has been driven back in the last big battle in East Prussia, now is standing at bay along the line of the Mauer, Bobr and Niemen rivers, within Russian territory.

It is evident that the struggle for the mountain passes has been extremely sanguinary and that the combatants in Galicia have assumed a more violent character.

Russians Claim Gains.
Petrograd, Feb. 23.—Repulses of the Austrians by the Germans at several points on the western front are claimed by the Russians in an official communication issued last night. It is stated that in eastern Galicia, southeast of Stanislau, "we brigades of Austrians, and off with less of 1,500 prisoners, including twenty officers and several machine guns. The communication follows:

"Fighting continues on the right bank of the Bobr and the Niemen in isolated engagements. An encounter of secondary importance occurred near Grodno, on the Lysskov road, which we attacked the Germans. The enemy's position was used to our advantage and we were able to take the Osowoz district. On the road from Lonsa we took Jedwabno, after a fierce combat. The enemy offered resistance in considerable force. The Russian army repulsed the attacks of the enemy on the north bank of the Pilica, in the district of Lonsa, were repulsed.

It has been definitely learned that the Austrians suffered very heavy losses in the north of Zakliczy, in western Galicia, on February 17.

After capturing the heights of Smolinka, east of Lypkow pass, in Carpathians, our troops repulsed repeated counter attacks of the Austrians, who reached a point within a few paces of our position, but were forced back with very heavy losses.

The Germans delivered four attacks against the heights of Myto Kouron on the night of February 20, but were driven back. We had carried the hill, which was an important part of the enemy's position. After attacking the Austrians south of Stanislau in eastern Galicia, and drove back the brigades after a combat in which the baronets sometimes were used. We took here 1,500 prisoners, including 20 officers and several machine guns.

WHEAT PRICE RELIEF

OF DARDANEL FORTSChicago Board of Trade President
Tells Investigators of Vast Russian Crops Tie-Up.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Feb. 23.—If the Dardanelles should be opened by the British and French fleet, thereby releasing wheat supplies of grain from Russia and the Danubian countries, there would be an immediate and radical change in the situation which in this country is bringing up the price of wheat, according to H. Canby, president of the Chicago board of trade. This statement Mr. Canby made while testifying at the investigation of the state attorney general into the causes of the high price of wheat, bread and flour.

"Demand Keeps Up Price.
"It was the tremendous demand of Europe for wheat keeping up the price, not speculation," declared Mr. Canby. He said he knew on the basis of authority that there was one European nation involved in the war which would gladly pay $2 a bushel for 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, if it could make the purchase.

"No power on earth," he testified, "except that of governmental prohibition of export, which would have resulted in a general financial panic and left the west with its wheat in the same position as the south with its cotton crop—would have prevented the present grain prices."

"The witness said he did not like the idea of investigating the situation as 'it tended to confuse.'"

"The witness said he was beginning to ask what these investigations mean," he said. "The question the farmer desires answered is this: Do the people of the great cities expect him to pay and prices for all the articles he is compelled to purchase, and at the same time deny him the right to take advantage of conditions which place his crops—the only thing he has to sell—on a prohibitive basis?"

"The sharp rise in the price of wheat is due largely to the sensational newspapers and exchange agencies of Europe, which abroad and the fact that government financial aid to purchasers were the bidders for our wheat."

"But the situation is clearing up. What has reached its limit, and by the time spring arrives when the shipments from Canada and Argentina begin it will be well in hand. Abnormal prices cannot last. High prices cure high prices."

No Damaging Evidence.
Washington, Feb. 23.—Attorney General Gregory's investigation as to whether or not unlawful combinations of foodstuffs, has not shown any evidence, President Wilson told inquirers today, upon which prosecution could be founded. The department of justice, however, is still at work.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Feb. 23.—The entente allies have made representation to the United States that Germany is not treating the prisoners of war in the manner of the United States, as caring for the diplomatic interests of all warring powers, to make representation to the United States.

The effort to provide supervision of all prison camps by American army officers, in the interest of humanity and to establish uniform treatment, to have been permanently checked because the warring countries cannot agree upon the extent of the American activities.

Meanwhile some of the reports received declare that treatment of prisoners is in some cases in violation of the Geneva and Hague conventions.

Heavy Russian Losses.
Suwalki, Russian Poland, Saturday, Feb. 20 (delayed).—The German forces under Field Marshal Von Hindenburg by hard fighting and extraordinary marches, inflicted such a crushing defeat on the Russians, opposed to them in the recent battle of the Masurian lakes country, that the Russian remnants are a negligible quantity in the operations now in progress. The Russian killed and wounded in the four days' fighting are estimated at 30,000 men. Over 60,000 Russians out of a total of 150,000 engaged, are prisoners in German hands.

WARNING OF NEW SWINDLE

[Correspondence Associated Press.]
London, Feb. 23.—Scotland Yard warns the public against a new version of the old Spanish prisoner swindle. This time it is not a Spanish who has hidden a war chest of gold in an accessible mountain and appeals to some one to accept half the contents in return for furnishing him with bail money. In the new version of the swindle it is a Belgian who has hidden a war chest of gold in the mountains of the Alps and appeals to some one to accept half the contents in return for furnishing him with bail money.

A large number of these swindlers have been sent to England, and Scotland Yard men suspect the game is also being worked in the United States.

Public Entry.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Feb. 23.—President Taft's withdrawal of oil lands in California and Wyoming in 1909 without empowering legislation was held today by the supreme court and entry claims of individuals and corporations issued at hundreds of millions of dollars were annulled thereby.

President Taft withdrew the land as a conservation measure, and on June 25, 1910 congress passed a law ratifying his action.

Oil corporations principally entered many tracts within the two states and have resisted attempts of the government to put them out. The government demanded the withdrawal partly as being for preserving an oil supply for the navy.

Justice Lamar announced the court's decision, from which Justices Day, McKenna and Vandewater dissented.

The case has nothing to do with the enforceability of the prevailing form of oil lease, which is involved in another case.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT
AS THAW GOES TO TRIAL

New York, Feb. 23.—When Harry Thaw was arraigned for trial today before Judge Weeks on the charge of conspiracy to escape from Matteawan, he was jubilant in having escaped his nemesis—William Travers Jerome—for the first time since he killed Stanford White.

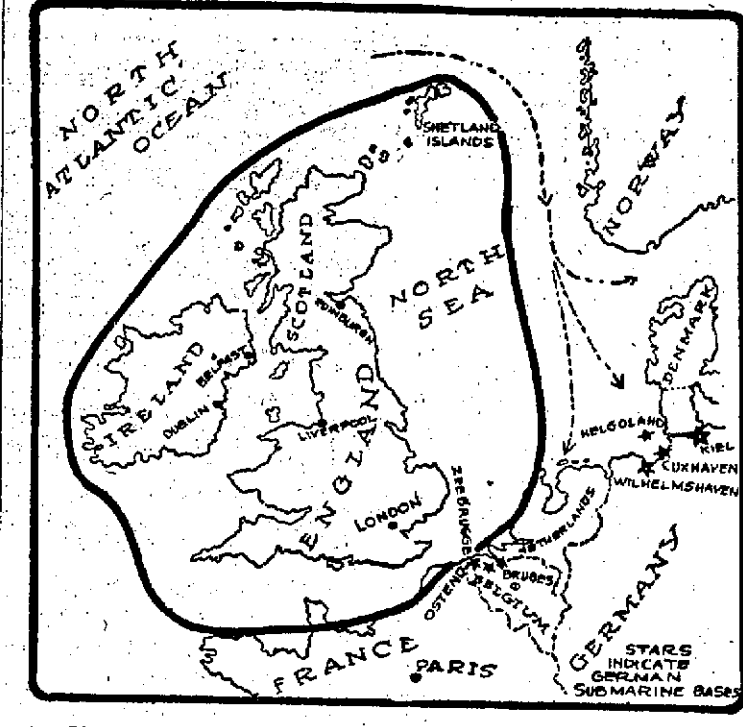

There was belief on both sides of the case that the hearing which he today might be the final hearing in the most notorious of American trials. If Thaw were found guilty, whatever proceedings were taken against him later would prove futile. He counsel declared. If he is convicted, he will be sentenced to life imprisonment on the conspiracy charge and returns him, instead, to Matteawan, a vital blow will have been struck at the defense.

Deputy Attorney General Kennedy planned to move for the trial of all the defendants in the conspiracy case together with Thaw.

HOW GERMANY HOPES TO STARVE ENGLAND

This map shows the naval war zone proclaimed by the German admiralty. The heavy black line around the British Isles, including the Shetland Islands, the English channel and the greater part of the Dutch coast, encloses the area in which Germany warns neutral ships to beware. The dotted lines around Scotland and the Shetland Islands, to the North sea, the Baltic sea and the "safe" part of the Netherlands indicate the safety routes American ships may take. The German submarine bases in Germany and Belgium are designated by stars.

GOVERNOR PHILIPP
FAVORS EMBARGO ON
BREAD AND BULLETSUnited States Only Interest in War
Is to End it for Humanity's
Sake, He Says.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 23.—"I believe it our moral duty to cease supplying munitions of war to the countries of Europe and if bread is one of the elements that they must have to continue it, let us cease to furnish that."

Thus spoke Gov. Philipp at the Washington-Lincoln celebration at the La Crosse State Normal school Monday night. More than 1,000 persons, who packed the hall, chose him. He declared in favor of the stopping of all shipments of arms.

"The great struggle going on in Europe is not a war of human commercial supremacy," said the governor, "in which we as Americans have no interest. We have but one duty in the present situation and that is to strive to end it in the interests of humanity. We should uphold our president in his efforts to maintain neutrality."

"Try to end the war," he said. "Our commerce will suffer and now and then a venturesome American flag will be buried in the sea. Under some conditions that would be unbearable. However, in the present situation such a misfortune may occur without any intentional act on the part of the responsible nation, and we must hold our hands off. We must not let ourselves be drawn into a war of controversy, serving no useful purpose, but merely increasing the cost to ourselves and the world."

"Great Britain tries to starve Germany and Germany retaliates by trying to starve England. If the end of this bloody conflict could be hastened by starvation our country would do well to regard the ports of both countries closed to our commerce if we can serve humanity by doing it."

Favors Army of 500,000.
The governor declared in favor of a first class navy and a land force of at least 500,000 men, which, he said, would be a moderate army in proportion to the country's size.

The governor, in the part of his speech devoted to education, declared at all hazards in favor of the improvement of the country schools which, he said, were in the same condition of neglect as they were when he was taught school thirty years ago. He said he was not particular about the methods, whether by having the normal schools educate more country teachers or by establishing special country training schools for that purpose, but whatever the means, it must be done.

"This school has no truer friend of education than myself, and I propose to help the university, the normal schools and the common schools all the way I can. I will permit me to do it," he said.

Gov. Philipp came here as the principal speaker in a community celebration of the holiday held under the auspices of the Normal. He returned to Madison today.

London, Feb. 23.—The Norwegian steamer Regin was sunk off Dover this morning by either a submarine or a mine. The crew of twenty-two men was saved. The Regin, which was carrying coal from the Tyne to Bordeaux, sank ten minutes after she was struck.

Crew Lands at Dover.
Dover, Feb. 23.—The crew of the Regin landed at Dover this forenoon. The men say they believed the ship was torpedoed by a German submarine.

The Regin is the second Norwegian steamer to encounter a submarine or mine in the English channel since February 18, when the German submarine blockade against British ports went into effect. The tank steamship Belridge was torpedoed by a German submarine off Folkestone last week. She was not, however, very seriously damaged, for after being beached at Walmer, she later made her way to port. The Regin is a steamer of 1107 net tonnage, and 265 feet long.

Disaster has overtaken two other Norwegian steamers in the last few days. The Regin went down in the Baltic last week presumably as result of striking a mine, or being torpedoed and the Cuba, a freighter, sank February 21, in the North Sea, after a collision.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The administration sees nothing in the Evelyn incident liable to cause international complications. It was said today after the cabinet meeting.

It was said to be practically certain that no replies would be sent to latest British and German notes. President Wilson told callers he had been informed that the captain of the Evelyn was not following a safe course laid out for him. He added that warnings had been given that mines were planted in the area of which the Evelyn was sunk.

AT SPECIAL HOSPITAL

[Correspondence Associated Press.]
Interburg, Germany, Feb. 23.—One of the best of the horse hospitals connected with the German army is that erected at this place, which has handled nearly two thousand horses since November. The average number of animals under treatment is over 600. During the past month 84 horses were operated on for severe wounds and 73 of these were discharged as cured and returned to service. Reckoning the average of a horse for army purposes at $325, these operations alone have saved the war office authorities $27,375. Many of the horses are suffering from slight wounds which rendered them temporarily unfit for service and these also were returned cured to the army, while hundreds of the sick horses have gone back to the front.

INSPECTION OF STATE
MILITIA STARTS TODAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 23.—The annual governmental inspection of the militia in Milwaukee began today. Company A, which is to be "gone over" by Captain Robert H. Westcott, U. S. army inspector.

Sheridan Guard, the oldest military company in Wisconsin, failed to hold special Washington's day ceremonies today because of the inspection. This is the first time since its organization in 1889 that the company has failed in this observance.

Other infantry divisions will be inspected as follows: Company K, Wednesday; Company D, Thursday; Company F, Friday, and Company E, Monday. The artillery inspection will take place on Monday, and under the supervision of Lieut. Louis Dougherty. On March 13 the cavalry will be inspected by Major M. M. McNamara.

THE FIRM HAND.

Foremost in the minds of the American people is the attitude that the administration at Washington is taking relative to the ultimatum of both Germany and England and the possible results of the diplomatic notes sent to both nations. The average reader is prone to take a snap judgment on this important question. In fact, one of the most important that has confronted any administration in the history of the nation. Be they pro-German or anti-German, their sympathies are aroused. In fact there is too much of this "pro" and "anti" talk in this country as a whole. This is the melting pot of the world. All nationalities have been invited to come to our shores and few families can go back beyond the second generation, the third for the majority, and trace their lineage to some foreign land. The Nation, in commenting upon the situation and the two notes sent across the Atlantic, says:

"It is obviously fortunate that the notes of protest by our government to Germany and Great Britain could be published on the same day. Their appearance together is mute but striking testimony to the purpose of the administration to be absolutely impartial. If American rights are endangered by either belligerent, the president will see that they are maintained; and will be just as frank and resolute in making the position of our government clear to England as to Germany. The publication of the two notes simultaneously was no coincidence. If President Wilson assumes a firmer tone to the German government than to the British, it is plainly because the proposals and implied threats of the German admiralty are clearly in violation of international law, while the occasional flying of the American flag by an English ship, and also because the former contains a much graver peril to American property and the lives of American citizens."

"Though the remonstrance to Great Britain could not, in the nature of the case, be put upon such high ground, or couched in such precise and warning terms, as the note to Germany, it is explicit and firm. It is one thing to admit the right of a belligerent ship to hoist a neutral flag in an emergency; it is another to protest against the frequent and even habitual use of this stratagem, in a way to bring neutral ships and neutral subjects into hazard. The president is fully justified in asking that the English authorities restrain this deceptive flying of the American flag within the narrowest limits. If the thing were to be done repeatedly, not only with the permission but under the orders of the British admiralty, and if American property were destroyed, in consequence, and American lives lost, it is difficult to see how the British government could shirk all responsibility. This is the view which our government urges, temperately yet with all the gravity and firmness. We do not doubt that the justice of the president's position in this matter will freely be conceded by the British government."

"To the German government, the note of the Washington administration reads a lesson in international law and the rights of neutrals. We do not consider it probable that any German commander of a submarine, unless he has gone crazy, would deliberately carry out the threat of the German admiralty. To sink even an enemy merchant ship without stopping to inquire what would become of the non-combatant crew and passengers, would be an atrocity. To sink a neutral vessel in that way would be an atrocity tinged with madness. Still the intimation that such a thing may occur lies plain in the official statement of the German admiralty, and our government had no other course open to it than to give the most solemn warning in advance that it would hold the German government to a strict accountability for any such transgression upon international law and outrageous disregard of the rights of neutrals and of humanity itself."

"It is certain that the president's protest will be seriously weighed by Germany. Count Reventlow, indeed, with his characteristic Navy-League jingoism, is quoted as declaring that Germany will not in the least mind if she makes an enemy of Germany's neutral country on earth; and two or three German newspapers are frothing to the same effect. But the responsible rulers of the German empire have not fallen into insanity. Knowing what fearful odds are already against them, they will surely not be reckless enough needlessly to increase the number of their foes. As for President Wilson, his political prestige cannot fail to be heightened by his stand in these matters. The president has again shown that the interests and the dignity of the United States are safe in his hands. His position, in the two notes, is not only sound in law and correct in form; it is resolute without bluster, and patriotic without a particle of spread-eaglesm."

"Prof. Franz von Liszt, of Berlin, has been lecturing on the international law of the war. With some things that he is reported to have said there can be no disagreement. Several ideas of the rights of nations, in time of war, which were supposed to be everywhere established and acted upon, have been rudely jarred from their pedestals. But to argue from this that international law has been absolutely destroyed, and that each nation is now free to go ahead and do what seemeth right in its own eyes, is to make too sudden a wreck of all modern civilization. Yet this is what Professor Liszt comes pretty near doing. After indulging in the usual denunciation of England for having proceeded rashly, he took the ground that Germany, also, was now entitled to act in accordance with 'German notions.' 'Germany must create a sea law against England.' Hence the notification of a 'war zone' around the British Isles; the threat to sink merchant vessels on sight by submarine attack, with the consequent peril to goods and passengers under neutral flags. This carries the conspicuous label, 'Made in Germany.' That being so, the position of the United States, and of all other neutral countries, is at once very much simplified. The United States will stand, not upon its own 'notions,' but upon the principles long since written into the law of nations."

"Despite the gravity of the issues involved, and the possible dangers that may result before they are settled, one cannot help feeling that the whole controversy is unreal. There is the more reason for believing that the German admiralty has been indulging in little except an empty defiance, and a threat which the event will prove to be virtually a bluff. When we stop to consider that Germany has not really the power to execute her menace. Her announced 'war zone,' and her blockade of the English coasts, are only on paper. Here and there she may get a submarine through the English naval defenses, to wreak a certain amount of havoc, but the idea that in any such way she can overcome British preponderance at sea is preposterous. In plain language, the German admiralty has been asserting, or seeming to assert, a sea-power which Germany does not, in fact, possess. The easier will it be, therefore, for her to recede from an attitude which, so far as it affects the United States, is both unlawful and intolerable."

Scientists believe they have discovered how to take the objectionable glands from the civet cat and convert the beastie into a household familiar. Beautiful as their fur is, the mere thought of past experiences with members of its specie would not make it a favorite in many homes. Science accomplishes wonderful things, but memory is even stronger.

Evidently that ship subsidy measure that Wilson does not want to have presented will be the only solution of the ship purchase problem after all. But why does the United States want to own ships just now, for European trade, when the trade routes are all closed by a paper blockade?

It must be a lot of satisfaction, to some of the members of the investigating committee of the legislature at Madison to dig up all the hidden skeletons in the former reform administration's darkest closets. They knew they existed but now they have the proof of their convictions.

Today we are recovering from the effects of our semi-holiday—Washington's birthday. Really the day has merely become a bank holiday after all, and the school children benefit by it, so why complain if the state legislature add another holiday to the list

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

The Day's News.
Now a New York expedition on an interesting mission has fared forth to find where hid is the wealth of Captain Kidd. They are sailing off the ocean. And they have a sort of notion that if they are brave and bold they will find the pirate's gold. Seems as though since the beginning of this interesting job. But they've never found a bob. I surmise their course is faulty. I would never sail the salty. Hoping that I'd find a store of the pirate wealth galore. I would stay right in the village of New York where there is pillage. There's more pirate gold right there than is buried anywhere. Piracy unprecedented, Right in New York was invented.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

READ-OR-TALKS.

A few days ago I finished my twenty-second reading of "Cranford." "Cranford" you see is my favorite "read-over" book.

Don't you think that almost everyone has certain books which he never completely loses sight of, but picks up year after year and reads over, not of course with the same devouring interest that he felt the first time, but with a warm friendliness that is even better?

A friend of mine re-reads "Little Women" always when she is convalescing and sometimes when she is shut in doors by a bad rain storm (never in a snow storm). New books and new friends are all very well for health, this woman says, but for a convalescent there is really nothing so restful as a few hours with such old friends as the Marsh family.

We were talking of this subject of "read-over" books the other day and various members of the group contributed their favorite. "David Copperfield" was one. "Satanstoe" was another. "Pride and Prejudice" another, while "Pendennis" was named by two members.

What Book Do You Re-read?

What is your "read-over" book? I think I can tell you one thing about it. It's a book whose greatest interest is people rather than events, a friendly book, a book whose characters have become so real to you that you find yourself confining them with people you actually know.

The books in which events are more important than the people are absorbing enough for a first reading but they are not the kind you go back to.

Someone has said that we read books in youth for plot; in middle age for the sake of the characters, and as we reach a still ripper period of development, for the author's comment. Of course any "read-over" book must be emphatically worth reading on the last two counts.

Of course there are some people who do not have any "read-over" books and can't imagine what anybody should want to read a book twice for. There was one such in our group.

"Aren't there enough books you haven't read in the world so you don't have to go back to the old ones?" he asked.

The author answers him: "Aren't there enough people you haven't met in the world so that you don't have to go back to the old friends?" he counter-questions.

Questions and Answers.

Question: H. T. C. writes that he has had business reverses and that she has gone to work, so that they may keep their home. She feels that her friends look down on her now, because they do not visit her, but thinks perhaps she misjudges them.

Reply: Perhaps H. T. C.'s friends fear she has no time to entertain. Why not ask them to come as always. If after such an invitation they avoid her, they are not worth bothering about—friends of that calibre never are.

Question: T. O. writes that the young man who has been taking her to theatre and to occasional dances wants her to marry him. She feels that perhaps he has a right to expect this, but that she is quite sure that she doesn't care for him.

Reply: Marriage would be altogether too great a price to pay for such attentions. It would simply mean a life-time of unhappiness. If she has been wrong in thinking him to believe she cares, marrying him would only increase that wrong. By all means acknowledge the fault, say "no"—and goodbye.

MME. NAZIMOVA BIG HIT IN "WAR BRIDES"

Mme. Nazimova in "War Brides."

Mme. Alla Nazimova, the famous Russian actress, is now playing the stellar role in "War Brides," a play which was first published last month and presented for the first time early in February in New York city. The success of the play as presented by Mme. Nazimova was such that the day after its first performance she was offered enough bookings to cover three years.

are a great source of annoyance when eating.

Baked Fish—Do not put water in the pan unless you wish to steam the fish instead of baking. After the fish has been well cleaned, stuff with the following dressing, which is sufficient for a fish weighing from four to six pounds: Take one cup cracked corn, one teaspoon onion minced fine, season with salt and pepper, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoonful capers and one teaspoonful chopped pickles. Also add one-fourth cup melted butter. Mix well and stuff into fish. This will make a dry dressing. If you prefer a wet dressing, which many people do, use stale bread crumbs and moisten with one beaten egg and the butter or warm water. Place in pan, put two or three tablespoons butter over and brown, bake until brown, and be sure to baste often.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES.

Egg Outlets—Take six hard-boiled eggs, chop fine, add one tablespoon parsley, one teaspoon onion minced fine, season with salt and pepper. Make white sauce of one cup milk, large tablespoon flour, butter size of walnut; season to taste. Pour over mixed eggs, set away to cool. When cold, make into outlets, dip in egg and cracker meal, fry in butter until golden brown. Serve on platter garnished with parsley. Peas go nicely with this dish.

Dutch Hash—One and one-half pounds round steak or hamburger, a little suet, one or more onions, one cup spaghetti, one-half can tomatoes. Grind steak, fry out suet in spider; brown meat. Cook spaghetti separately. Mince onion. Mix all, salt and pepper, add a little water. Fine re-heated.

Kidney Bean Salad—One cup chopped olives, 1½ cups chopped celery, two cups cooked or canned beans, one small bottle of salad dressing; mix well and serve on lettuce leaf.

Foolish Clerk.

First She—"The clerk at the post office said the letter was overweight and I would have to put another stamp on it. Wasn't he silly?" Second She—"Why, dear?" First She—"Wouldn't another stamp make it still heavier?"

GERMANS JUST DISCOVER BUCKWHEAT GOOD FOR FOOD

(Correspondence Associated Press.) Berlin, Feb. 22.—Professor Kuhl of Kiel after a series of scientific experiments, has reached a conclusion that will be of deep interest to untold millions of Americans devoted to griddlecakes and syrup—namely, that buckwheat can be eaten by humans. It is a somewhat curious fact that in Germany, except in some parts of South Germany, this grain is used exclusively as feed for animals. The professor finds however that a mixture of twenty percent of buckwheat flour with wheat flour gives "an elastic, tough dough, which rises well with yeast and furnishes a well tasting bread."

In view of this, and also of the fact that buckwheat can be grown on land fit for nothing else, the professor recommends that it be used to bake out the wheat supply.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell had been house cleaning and rearranging the furniture in the bedroom. She saved her work with a pardonable pride. Every article of furniture was in a different place, except Dick's desk, and that had no castors on it. Besides, it had to stay near the electric light. The crowning triumph of her arrangement, in her opinion, was the bed, with the head across the corner so that it was a broidered pillow cases showed to the best advantage from the door.

Late in the afternoon Nell's mother had come over to stay for dinner and she had praised the little housewife and her successful efforts.

"I did it all myself. You see, I am trying to save, as times are so hard. Dick will be so pleased. There he comes now," and Nell ran to meet him and followed him to the bedroom door, listening for the expected outburst of enthusiasm over the improved appearance of the room. No sound came forth and peeping around the door jamb she saw Dick sitting in the corner. She was very tired from the unaccustomed work to stand with him. She burst into tears and rushed into the kitchen, where her mother was finishing the dinner preparations.

"Why, Nell," exclaimed Mrs. Reeves in dismay, "what is the matter?"

"Come in, father; it's a long time since you've been over here to dinner. Dick was helping him off with his coat."

Nell was dejectedly dishing up the dinner when her mother returned. "Don't punish father for the unpleasantness. Dick meant no harm. Go wash your face and powder your nose; I'll finish here," and Mrs. Reeves took the dish.

Dick stole into the bedroom after Nell to say, "Never meant to hurt you, dear. Don't be miserable. Please overlook my silliness, because I am tired," and she put her arms around his neck.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLK

THE ADVENTUROUS GOAT. A gay young Goat was playing in a vacant lot one day. When all at once he stopped and said, "I think I'll go away. I've always lived right here in town; I think I will get out."

Said he, "and try the simple life I've heard so much about."

Now, as you know, a Goat can eat all sorts of things with zest. But old tin cans and circus bills are what he likes the best. So when that gay young Goat informed his parents of his plan they said, "Out in the country you won't find nary a can."

"You won't find nary circus bill, you'll live on grass and such. And as for this here simple life, you will not like it much."

(The reason that his parents spoke in this unlettered way was that they did not go to school at all in their young day.)

But though they talked and talked to him, till they were almost hoarse. That gay young Goat was headstrong and would not change his course. He set out for the country and walked until he found "He'd left the city far behind, then stopped to look around."

"Dear me," he said, "I never knew the country was so still. I'm hungry, too. I wish I had a good crisp circus bill; I don't know why I ever left my happy vacant lot. Compared with all this loneliness, it is a festive spot."

Just then it started to get dark, and out upon the hill He heard a sound he'd never heard before—a Whippoorwill. "I'm very sure that is a fierce and hungry Wolf," said he; "I think I'll go back home; I know my folks are missing me!"

He ran while he reached his home, all tired and out of breath. And when his parents asked him if he liked the country much. He said, "I found it far too full of hungry wolves and such."

And while his mother bustled round and got a special treat Of three or four tomato cans and things for him to eat. He said, "For love the country is no doubt a lovely spot. But as for me, I'll always be contented with my lot."

Mrs. George T. Guernsey (left) and Mrs. William T. Story.

Already two candidates for the presidency of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been announced, although the elections will not take place until April. These two, it is believed, will be the principal contestants for the honor and one of the other will in all likelihood be the next president general. Mrs. William C. Story of New York, the present incumbent, has just announced her candidacy for re-election, and Mrs. George T. Guernsey, the present regent of Kansas, is to oppose her. Mrs. Guernsey comes from Independence, Kansas, and expects to have the support of the west and south in the election.

GERMANS JUST DISCOVER BUCKWHEAT GOOD FOR FOOD

(Correspondence Associated Press.) Berlin, Feb. 22.—Professor Kuhl of Kiel after a series of scientific experiments, has reached a conclusion that will be of deep interest to untold millions of Americans devoted to griddlecakes and syrup—namely, that buckwheat can be eaten by humans. It is a somewhat curious fact that in Germany, except in some parts of South Germany, this grain is used exclusively as feed for animals. The professor finds however that a mixture of twenty percent of buckwheat flour with wheat flour gives "an elastic, tough dough, which rises well with yeast and furnishes a well tasting bread."

In view of this, and also of the fact that buckwheat can be grown on land fit for nothing else, the professor recommends that it be used to bake out the wheat supply.

Where to Dine in Chicago

IN Chicago many begilded show-place restaurants derive most of their revenue from visitors to the city. Those are not the places regularly patronized by residents.

The sensible Chicagoan knows that in those places he cannot get the value of his money and that his wife and daughters may be brought in contact with undesirable people. Therefore he prefers a restaurant such as

GERMAN SAVINGS BANKS DOING A GOOD BUSINESS SINCE OUTBREAK OF WAR

(Correspondence Associated Press.) Berlin, Feb. 23.—A report on the German savings banks shows that they have done satisfactory business since the war began. In the days around the end of July about $24,000,000 more was withdrawn from them than was paid in; but in August the deposits exceeded the withdrawals.

In October, owing to the payment of subscriptions on the big national loan, the withdrawals again exceeded deposits by some $90,000,000, but the reduction of deposits during the second half of the year was altogether only about $23,000,000; and if the interest credited to depositors at the end of the year be taken into account, their holdings for the half year actually increased by almost $60,000,000. For the entire year the increase was over $200,000,000. A considerable number of savings banks have already issued their annual reports for 1914, and not one of them shows a reduction in deposits. Since the beginning of the new year a considerable improvement in the business of the banks has been observed. From various parts of the country it is reported that deposits have been heavier than ever before. People are apparently laying by money to subscribe for the next big war loan, which will probably be brought out in about two months.

Household Hint

FISH FOR LENT.

There is nothing more delicious than a properly prepared fish. It is not only nutritious, but since it contains little fat, especially the white varieties, it is easily digested and is well adapted to all those whose occupations demand vigorous energy.

There is no better fish than salmon. It has the distinction of being richer than meat in foodstuffs.

Next in value comes flat halibut, followed by shad, whitefish, mackerel, bluefish, sea bream, bass, flounder, trout, cod, haddock, cusk, etc.

Salmon, mackerel and bluefish are red-bellied fish and have the oil distributed throughout the body. They are nutritious for those with good digestive organs, but they are too rich for invalids.

More easily digested are whitefish, flounder, halibut, cod and haddock, because the oil is in the liver.

Oily fish should never be fried. Broiling and baking are the best methods of preparing fish.

Salted fish is very fine as a relish, but the nutritive qualities are lacking in it; and it should not be depended upon for nourishment.

Whitefish should be cooked with butter or fat to make it desirable food, because it is so dry.

The fish of good fresh fish is firm and hard and if pressed with the finger it will rise at once. If the eyes are dull and sunken, the gills pale and the flesh flabby or soft, the fish is not fresh.

After the fish is purchased, clean it as soon as possible in strongly salted water. Wash it (do not soak it) by wiping it with a cloth that has been wet in salt water. Then salt and place it in a cool place. For ice around it, if necessary, but do not let it touch the ice, as fresh water and ice will soften it. When once it is considered unfit to eat, those who know what good fish really is, will not touch it.

To skin a fish, cut a thin, narrow strip down the backbone, taking off the dorsal fin. Then open the lower part half way down. Slip the knife under and up through the body part of the gills, and hold this body part between the thumb and finger and then do the skin off toward the tail.

To bone a fish, clean and strip off the skin. Lay the fish flat on a board. Begin at the tail and run the knife in under the flesh close to the bone, and scrape it away carefully so as not to break the flakes. When the flesh on one side is removed, slip the knife under the bone, leaving the flesh on the board; then pull out all the small bones left in the flesh, which you can easily feel with the fingers. Great care should be taken that no bones are removed, because, besides being dangerous, they are a great source of annoyance when eating.

Baked Fish—Do not put water in the pan unless you wish to steam the fish instead of baking. After the fish has been well cleaned, stuff with the following dressing, which is sufficient for a fish weighing from four to six pounds: Take one cup cracked corn, one teaspoon onion minced fine, season with salt and pepper, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoonful capers and one teaspoonful chopped pickles. Also add one-fourth cup melted butter. Mix well and stuff into fish. This will make a dry dressing. If you prefer a wet dressing, which many people do, use stale bread crumbs and moisten with one beaten egg and the butter or warm water. Place in pan, put two or three tablespoons butter over and brown, bake until brown, and be sure to baste often.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES.

Egg Outlets—Take six hard-boiled eggs, chop fine, add one tablespoon parsley, one teaspoon onion minced fine, season with salt and pepper. Make white sauce of one cup milk, large tablespoon flour, butter size of walnut; season to taste. Pour over mixed eggs, set away to cool. When cold, make into outlets, dip in egg and cracker meal, fry in butter until golden brown. Serve on platter garnished with parsley. Peas go nicely with this dish.

Dutch Hash—One and one-half pounds round steak or hamburger, a little suet, one or more onions, one cup spaghetti, one-half can tomatoes. Grind steak, fry out suet in spider; brown meat. Cook spaghetti separately. Mince onion. Mix all, salt and pepper, add a little water. Fine re-heated.

Kidney Bean Salad—One cup chopped olives, 1½ cups chopped celery, two cups cooked or canned beans, one small bottle of salad dressing; mix well and serve on lettuce leaf.

Foolish Clerk.

First She—"The clerk at the post office said the letter was overweight and I would have to put another stamp on it. Wasn't he silly?" Second She—"Why, dear?" First She—"Wouldn't another stamp make it still heavier?"

Dr. Osler on Tuberculosis

Sir William Osler, one of the foremost of living medical men, formerly of Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, and now Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford, says in his "Practice of Medicine" (1892), on page 249: "The healing of pulmonary tuberculosis is a process which is essentially the recovery of patients to whom the plastic tissue and bacilli have been found. It is the granulations, products and associated phenomena of a scar tissue is formed, while the smaller caseous areas become impregnated with lime salts. The conditions alone should the term healing be applied."

Many eminent medical authorities have testified to the efficacy of lime salts in the treatment of tuberculosis. The success of Beckman's alternative in this and other chronic and bronchial affections may be due partly to the fact that it contains a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated. Widespread use of this remedy in numerous cases of tuberculosis—many of which appear to have yielded completely to it—justifies our belief that it is worth a trial, unless some other treatment already is succeeding. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs. We make no promises concerning it, any more than reputable physicians give promises with their prescriptions. But we know of many cases in which IT HAS HELPED. Your druggist, dealer or can get it, or you can send direct to Beckman Laboratory, Philadelphia.

THE LADY AND THE PIRATE

By EMERSON HOUGH

Copyright, 1913, by Emerson Hough

"How can you ask? And how can I reply, save in one way, after taking the advice of yonder pirate captain, your blue eyed nephew? He says they always live happy ever after. Listen, Helena. All the world lies before us, and it is yesterday once more. 'The Mediterranean, Helena, how blue it is! The Bernadine, how fine they are of a winter day! And yonder lie motley Egypt and her sands, or Paris, Helena, or Vienna, the voluptuous, with her gay ways of life, or Nagasaki, Helena—little brown folk running about and all the world white in blossoms—all the world, Helena, with only you and I in it. If I could give you all that, would it be nice?"

"Yes," said she. "But a man's place is to fight and to work. You ran away, and you lost."

"But am I not trying to reconquer my fortune, Helena? You see, I have already acquired a yacht, although but a few weeks ago I started in the world with scarcely more than my bare hands. Could Monte Cristo have done more?"

"Really, Harry, how long is this thing to last?"

"It isn't money a woman wants in a man. Aunt Lucinda and I both are weary of our hatbox yonder. That's what I asked you—how long?"

"As long as I like, Helena. You and your Aunt Lucinda shall dwell there. What would you say to three years or so?"

"She seemed not to hear. 'I believe I've found a four leaf clover,' said she."

"Much good fortune may it bring you."

"Let me try my fortune," said she and began plucking off the leaves. "He loves me, he loves me not; he loves me, he loves me not."

"There," she said, holding up the naked stem triumphantly; "I knew it!"

"It would be a fairer test had you a daisy, Helena," said I, "or something with more leaves; not that I know whose has been this ordeal. Suppose it were myself and that you tried this one. I handed her a trefail, but she waved it aside."

"I will try to find you a four leaf clover for your own after-while," said she, and bobbed me a very pretty courtesy. Angered, I caught at the stick I was carrying with so sudden a grip that I broke it in two.

"I did not know your hands were so strong, Harry," said she.

"Would they were stronger," was my answer. "And were I in charge of the affairs of Providence the first thing I would do would be to write the neck of every woman in the world."

"And then set out to put them together again, Harry? Don't be silly."

"Oh, yes, naturally! Why does a woman love a man, Helena? You say I must not be silly. Should I then be wise?"

"No; you are much too wise, so that you often bore me."

"Nor should he be poor?"

"No."

"Nor rich?"

"Certainly not. Rich men are usually as boring. They talk about themselves too much. But look!"—she pointed out across the water—"the train is leaving the ferryboat! Isn't that Captain Peterson going aboard the train?"

"Yes, Helena, I've sent him downtown to get some light reading for you and your Aunt Lucinda—'For's Book of Martyrs' and the 'Critique of Pure Reason'—the latter especially recommended to yourself. I would I had in print a copy of my magnanimous, my treatment on native American children. My book on the mosquito is going to be handsomely illustrated, Helena, believe me."

She turned upon me with a curious look. "Harry," said she, "you've changed in some ways. If I were not so bored by life in yonder hatbox I might even be interested in you for a few minutes. You used always to be so sober, but now, sometimes, I wonder if I understand you. Honestly, you were an awful stick, and no girl likes a stick about her. What do girls care which dynasty it was that built the pyramids? If you would listen to reason and end this foolishness and set us all ashore, why, I would be almost willing to forgive you, and we might be friends again—only friends, Harry, as we once were. Why not, Harry?"

"You wheedle well," said I, "but you forget that what you ask is impossible. I am Black Bart the Avenger, and the head of every man is against me. I am too deep in this adventure to end it here. Why, I did not even dare get downtown for fear I might be arrested. Nothing remains but further flight, and when you ask me to fly and leave you here you ask what is impossible."

She stood for a time silent, a trifle paler, her fingers fallen from her hand, clearly unhappy, but clearly not yet beaten. "Come," said she coldly, "we must not be brutal to Aunt Lucinda also. Let us go back."

"Yes," said I, "now you have back your parole."

"I think I should like an artichoke for luncheon," said she. "Vinegar, you know." And she passed aft, her head hidden by her white parasol, but I knew with chin as high as though she were Marie Antoinette, herself. Nor did I feel much happier than had I been her executioner.

CHAPTER XIV.

IN WHICH IS A Pretty Kettle of Fish.

MISS HELENA EMORY had her artichoke for luncheon, and, judging from my own, my boy John never had prepared a better, good as he was with artichokes, but we ate apart, the ladies not coming to our table. It was late afternoon before I saw Helena again, once more come on deck. I did not account her. I longed for nothing so much as that night or Peterson would come.

He did come at last, late in the afternoon, on an outboard train, and he hurried aboard as rapidly as he might. The first thing he did was to hand me a copy of an afternoon paper. I opened it eagerly enough, already well assured of what news it might carry.

On the front page under a large black head was a dispatch from Baton Rouge relating other dispatches received at that point from many points between Plaquemine and Bayou Sara. These, in short, told the story of the most high handed attempt at river piracy known in recent years. The private yacht of Calvin Davidson, a wealthy northern business man on his way south for the winter, had been seized by a band of masked ruffians, who boarded her while the yacht's owner was temporarily absent on important business in the city of Natchez.

"Peterson," said I after digesting this interesting information, "have one or two of the boys go overboard in slings and seem to be painting her sides. That will give the look that we are safe to be here some time, which is the last thing the Belle Helena really would do or will do. They think we've run past the city already, and they'll be watching at quarantine and along the Lake Borgne canal. Most of the yachts go out that way, headed for Florida. We'll go the other way. It's an adventure, Peterson, and one which any viking, like yourself, ought to relish."

"Frankly, Peterson—and because you have been long in my employ—I'll tell you something. I intend to marry that young lady if she's not already married to Mr. Davidson."

"Lord, Mr. Harry, she ain't, at least not since she came aboard the boat."

"In that case," said I, drawing a long breath, "this is not such a bad world after all."

At last the night fell full, and gladly enough I gave the order for the continuance of our journey. We slipped downstream gently and silently and finally shipped our supplies.

Jean Lafitte proved unable to restrain his curiosity, watching the river, and his habit of close observation was of benefit in an unexpected way.

He pointed in the dim light to a low lying, battered power boat moored in the same slip with us. Something in her look seemed familiar.

I hastily stepped on the wharf, and got a closer look in the warring beams of an arc light at the name on the boat's bows. There in indistinct and shaky but unmistakable characters was the title painted by my young ruffians weeks earlier—Sea Rover!

"Jean Lafitte," I whispered, "you are right, and now indeed we must have a care. You varlet has beaten us into New Orleans."

Helena appeared on deck.

"If you took me by New Orleans without supper at Luigi's I should hate you even more," she said.

"Jean—Jean Lafitte!" I called out in a low tone of voice.

"Aye, aye, sir!" he saluted.

"I am going uptown with the captive maiden. Do you stand here on watch. We shall be gone about three hours."

"Hully gee!" ejaculated Jean Lafitte. But at once he saluted again. "This well, Black Bart," said he.

"Tell Captain Peterson to let no one come on board this boat under any pretense, nor must any one leave it until I get back. If any one asks for me say I'm uptown."

"Isn't Aunt Lucinda going, too?" demanded Helena.

"She certainly is not!"

"Is it quite correct for me to go alone with you?"

"That is your part of the adventure, Helena," said I calmly. "An instant later I had led her across the dingy warehouse dock, over dusty streets, to a crooked street car line over which I could hear approaching one of the frequent cars."

Luigi's place, as all men knew, is situated upon a small, crooked and very dirty street, yet none the less it

The difference in buying one of the most efficient, latest and up-to-date cough and cold remedies (which can be made at home), and buying the old, ordinary, ready-made kinds, is that with the new one you get all pure medicine, instead of buying a large proportion of sugar and water, besides paying for bottles, corks and labels; and it usually requires 2 to 3 bottles of the old-fashioned, ready-made remedies to break up a cough or cold, while 2 ounces (50¢ worth) of Schiffmann's new Concentrated Expecto-rant, which is altogether different from any other cough remedy, and is so strongly concentrated that 2 ounces, when mixed at home with simply one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water, makes a full pint (16 ounces) of excellent

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

Dissolve It, That's Best Way.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

is an abode of contentment for those who know good living. When Helena and I entered the door I felt as one again at home. Therefore, as always, I had no occasion for surprise when Jean, my waiter these many years at Luigi's, stepped forward as though it had been but last week and not three years ago when he had seen me. He called me by name, greeted me again to his city and gently aided Helena with her wraps and gloves.

"And m'sieu cannot long remain away from us forever?" said he.

"It has been three years, Jean," said I; "more is the pity. But now I can remain three hours. Will that serve? At the end of that time we must away."

Jean was human, yet discreet. He knew that when last he saw me I was a single man. Now he had doubts. He stood hovering about, a question on his tongue, smitten of admiration much as had been my dog, Partial, at his first sight of Helena. At last he made excuse to step close behind my chair under pretense of finding my napkin.

"Hafin, m'sieu," said he, smiling.

"Pas encore, Jean!" I replied.

I saw a slow flash on Helena's cheek, but she gave no other sign that she had overheard. So I began forthwith making much ado about ordering our supper, which, as usual, really was much a matter of Jean's taste.

"Harry," Helena said, "I don't like to say anything, but you know—you have been telling me you were so poor. Now, a girl doesn't want to make it difficult."

"You say you saw a burglar climbing out of a window in the house next door to you and he had a phonograph under his arm?" asked the tall man.

"I did, asserted the short man."

"Did you call the police?" asked the tall man.

"Police nothing!" replied the short man. "I called the burglar over and handed him a dollar."

"I never saw anyone so obstinate and set as John is."

"You surprise me!"

"Yes, indeed. Why, only this morning we had a dispute, but I stood firm, and told him he might move the pyramids, but he couldn't budge me when my mind was made up."

"And he finally admitted that he was wrong?"

"Well, about the same thing. He said, 'Give your own way, Marie.'"

"Of course. But what was the argument about?"

MILTON ANNOUNCES A FARMERS' COURSE

Arrangements completed for institute on March 22, 23, and 24.

Arrangements have been completed for a Farmers' Short Course at Milton March 22, 23 and 24, conducted by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture in co-operation with Milton College. This course is arranged for the benefit primarily of farmers and farm wives, but will be of interest to all who are interested in agriculture and in home making.

Topics of vital importance to farmers in this vicinity will be discussed by men who are devoting their lives to their study.

There will also be stock and grain judging, and prizes awarded. For the women there will be practical demonstrations in cooking, sewing and various branches of home economics with inspirational lectures. FIND RUINS OF ANCIENT RACE IN NEBRASKA

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 23.—Ruins, left by some prehistoric race, in the vicinity of Howe, Nebraska, have recently been inspected and studied by Prof. Gerard Fowke, the St. Louis geologist, who is curator of the St. Louis museum.

Fowke has been gathering scientific data on the primitive inhabitants of the Missouri valley, and he investigated the remains of their civilization. He began with the ancient logs ruins north of Kansas City and followed the west bank of the river northward, tracing the northern retreat of these ancient farmers and gardeners.

After an exhaustive examination of the ruins found at Howe, Nebraska, at Pedu, the professor is of the opinion that the ancient remains recently discovered near White Cloud, Kansas, were of work made by the same race. Considerable work has been done at Howe under the direction of C. Meek, and a large number of the bones of skeleton gardeners, instruments have been unearthed. The tools, for the most part, were found cached beneath what had once been the floors of the dwellings, where they were buried in beds of ashes.

Scientists are now of the belief that a number of the remains found along the Missouri river and the neighboring country were those of a civilization which preceded that of the Indians.

Skeletons discovered by Robert P. Gilder, of Omaha, and now in the university of Nebraska museum, are declared by scientists to greatly antedate the Indian. The skulls show much less brain capacity than those of the Indian, and have the very receding forehead characteristic of the early man of the race, and but little higher than the ape or gorilla type.

Flames can now plainly be seen during the night.

During the sixty-two years that the mines have been after millions have been expended by the Leigh Coal Navigation Company and millions of dollars worth of coal has been reduced to ashes. Powerful pumps for many years were constantly kept working at an enormous cost pumping water into the valley in the hopes of, however, proved to be without avail.

One million dollars was then expended to sink an immense concrete wall deep down into the earth in front of the underground conflagration in with the hope of checking it. Quite recently all the caves and abandoned shafts were sealed or filled in to prevent any draughts reaching the fire, but this seemed only to increase the activity of the flames. The blaze after raging for some time died out of its own accord and mine

1. Chlorophyll a (Chl a) is the primary photosynthetic pigment in most plants and algae. It is responsible for capturing light energy and converting it into chemical energy through the process of photosynthesis.

2. Chlorophyll b (Chl b) is an accessory pigment that works in conjunction with Chl a to capture light energy. It broadens the range of wavelengths that can be absorbed by the photosynthetic system.

3. Carotenoids are a group of pigments that include carotenes and xanthophylls. They act as accessory pigments, capturing light energy and transferring it to Chl a for use in photosynthesis.

4. Xanthophylls are a subset of carotenoids that play a role in photoprotection. They help dissipate excess light energy as heat, preventing damage to the photosynthetic apparatus.

5. Anthocyanins are water-soluble pigments that give plants their red, purple, and blue colors. They are not directly involved in photosynthesis but can play a role in plant defense and signaling.

6. Flavonoids are a large class of plant pigments that include flavones, flavanones, and flavonols. They are involved in various plant processes, including UV protection, defense against pathogens, and attraction of pollinators.

7. Anthoxanthins are a type of flavonoid that give plants their yellow and white colors. They are often found in the cell walls of plant tissues.

8. Anthocyanins (repeated) are also responsible for the red and purple colors seen in many fruits and flowers.

Anti-Bellum Brussels Described; Prosperous Capital of Busy Nation

Drawing a picture of Brussels as it was before the present war, the National Geographic society describes the capital of the Belgians in the following terms:

"The Brussels of before the war was the one indulgence that the industrious Belgians permitted themselves. Other Belgian cities were built for practical purposes; the Belgians are the hard-headed folk of the centuries—but Brussels was built to please. Strategic sites near the raw materials of industry or upon the lines of trade, ports and strategic points for the distribution of agricultural produce explain every Belgian city, except Brussels and Ostend—two cities which were built exclusively for the benefit of rich foreigners who had money to spend. Brussels was the weakest, the luxurious foible of the hard-working Belgians.

"Brussels had been of a miniature, it reproduced, feature for feature, the breathless pleasure of Paris, the bright art and student life, the teeming night-life, and all the bewitching pastimes of the ultra in fashion and fortune. These things were just as in Paris though drawn to a much smaller scale. But proportionately there were more Belgians in Brussels than Frenchmen in Paris or Germans in Berlin or Englishmen in London. Those three greater war capitals have the peoples of the world among them. Brussels was primarily Belgian.

"The population of the city, together with its immediate suburbs, exceeded half a million. Brussels was considerably larger and livelier than the American capital, Washington, which it might be noted, is the smallest and most sedate of all the important capitals of the world. Nevertheless, even Washington has a more solid, a more extensive appearance than the chief city of Belgium.

"The city lies on the navigable river Senne, 39 miles from the sea.

Old Brussels is pentagonal, and magnificent boulevards mark the sites of the old fortifications. New Brussels lies on higher land, it is dry and healthful, and contains the finer residences and most of the beautiful public buildings. The lower town is devoted to business and to the canals which reach to Ghent, Antwerp and Charleroi.

"Brussels began somewhere in the 7th century as a congregation, a congregation which gathered to hear St. Gervy, Bishop of Cambrai, preach. St. Gervy was one of those rare old heroes of youth who were matched to their teachings with their lives and who were in command of an irresistible eloquence. The camp of religious enthusiasts grew rapidly into a village, which early distinguished itself in manufacture and trade. Brussels has had a changeable history. By the early Middle Ages it had grown wealthy and it has since been a home of wealth and its splendor. It has been twice destroyed by fire, and has acknowledged many masters.

"Belgium is a land of the workingman. There was, probably, hardly a drone to be found in all the little kingdom. Everybody was in business in Belgium; everybody was bent upon making money, and everybody was proud of his business as his bent. In short, the whole country was self-made, and therefore democratic. Brussels, on the other hand, the national luxury, has always been aristocratic in tone and feeling. The symbols of labor and of practicality were not allowed to intrude in Brussels, which stands like an oasis in the desert with its savoir-vivre, its pure taste, its architecture, its devotion to art, music and the theatre, its light gaiety, and its gracefully-worn luxury. The splendor of Brussels is not the crass splendor of the untasteful, it is the pleasing elegance of an old Kaiserstadt like Vienna.

WINTER DOUBLES WORK.
In summer the work of eliminating poisons and acids from the blood is helped by perspiration. In cold weather, with little out door work or exercise to cause sweating, the kidneys have to cause sweating. Foley Kidney Pills help overworked, weak and diseased kidneys to filter and cast out of the blood the waste matter that causes pains in sides or back, rheumatism, sciatica, stiffness of joints, sore muscles and other ills resulting from improper elimination.—W. T. Sherer.

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Deep Purple" Tonight.

Today Clara Kimball Young is being featured in the well known Lieber production, "The Deep Purple."

It has been pictured into the parts with all the realism possible only to motion pictures and a strong cast.

The play starts in peaceful country scenes, and it ends there, Doris, the decoy innocent, unsuspecting, trusting, is craftily lured from her home and the side of her gentle clergyman-father to undergo a harrowing series of adventures in the great city, but at length she finds her way back home to peace and happiness, and the play therefore ends as

SCENE FROM "THE DEEP PURPLE" at Apollo Today.

It began, in a delightfully poetical environment. But between the beginning and the end, the drama and tragedy of the intensest, most lurid kind, punctuated by some diverting comedy, are concentrated.

"The Deep Purple" is a nature to hold all or any audience deeply interested by the power of its story, the strength of its acting and the excellence of its production.

The popular film stars, Phillips Smalley and his wife Lois Weber have produced through Bosworth, Inc., a play of unusual interest, "False Colours" which will be presented at the Apollo on Wednesday of this week.

The play, so intense in its dramatic expression, demanded a cast of unusual ability and Mr. Smalley has secured for this production actors who have interpreted with sincerity and conviction this forceful silent drama.

Miss Weber plays the dual role of Mrs. Moore, the theatre manager, and her daughter Florence. With the rare touch of a great artist she invests her acting with the glowing charms of her own personality and handles the difficult role with appealing delicacy and finesse.

Mr. Smalley portrays with forceful sincerity and emotional strength the leading role of the play, Adele Farrington as the housekeeper gives a remarkable character drawing of a mother whose love for her son results in a bad ending of both.

Among the balance of the company is Courtenay Foote, Marc Hebert, Charles Marriott, Dixie Carr, Roberta Hickman, Will Harrison, Fred Wilson, Marjorie Watt.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

There is no question as to the wonderful progress the picture industry has made. There must be a reason. Today one firm makes what is called a Special feature of two or three reels; tomorrow the other firm improves by making a feature with five reels.

This may seem like the limit, but let us not lose sight of the fact that the public is always demanding greater and still greater subjects in the Photo Drama. The result that after great preparation the Vitaphone Company proposed America's greatest dramatic triumph—"The Christian" by Hall Caine.

This masterpiece production required nine months time to produce—600 scenes—3,000 people and eight parts. The leading parts of Glory Quave and John Storm required Stars of the greater magnitude and Edith Story and Earl Williams were selected.

"The Christian" will be seen at Myers Theatre for two days, February 24th and 25th, matinee at 3:00, evening 7:00 to 9:00.

The following wonderful cost of photo stars appear in this production.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"Peg O' My Heart."

Oliver Morosco will present at the Myers Theatre, Monday, March 1, his production of the successful comedy "Peg O' My Heart," which is again duplicating its success of last season, in the theatres of the country. The extraordinary success of this play, by its humanity and wholesomeness—two elements which in these days of bizarre mechanical plots, twirly sexualities are as a rule, put so far in the back ground as to be almost mythological.

Peg the little Irish-American girl, is as witty as a character from Thackeray's pen, and has the quaint pathos of a Dickens person. The play proves conclusively that theatregoers can still laugh heartily and sincerely at humor which is not coarse, and a simple story, directly and simply told, is more potent than plot, fantastic, complex or otherwise.

Known throughout the country as the best "Peg" that ever played the role will appear here, supported by several members of the original New York cast, chief of which are Thomas Holdings, Alice Butler, Vivian Gilbert, Agnes Hieron, Miller, Sydney Mather, Marie Merlan, Robert Torsyth and Herbert Ashton.

DRAMA OF THE MOUNTAINS

GIVEN AT MYERS THEATRE

"The Call of the Cumberlands." Pretty Playlet, Appeared Here Last Evening.

Hugo B. Koch, who it will be remembered, appeared here last season in "The Servant in the House," appeared last evening at the Myers Theatre in his own dramatization of Charles Neville Buck's pretty story of mountain life, "The Call of the Cumberlands."

Mr. Koch was seen as Samson South, an upstart mountaineer, who later "goes down below" to the cities and acquires "book learnin'" to help out his mountain relatives in their feuds and wars with the revenue officers. Mr. Koch was ably supported by a cast of ten others. The scenery was very pretty and whittal the performance was unusually good for the prices it played at.

CELEBRATED NIGGERHEAD

IN APPEARANCE is as bright and glossy as hard coal, and as clean to handle. IT IS PERFECTLY PURE and is free from stone, slate, bone, or foreign substances of any kind. IT BURNS with a tremendous heat.

IT MAKES NO SMOKE to speak of. Upon throwing NIGGERHEAD on the fire, the soot particles are quickly released, and owing to its high carbon, are quickly consumed, leaving a smokeless, lasting bed of hot coals.

IT MAKES ABOUT ONE PER CENT ASH, according to chemical analysis, or a little over 20 pounds to the ton.

A USER OF NIGGERHEAD TAKES OUT ASHES ONLY ONCE A WEEK. With average soft coal an ordinary furnace needs cleaning every day.

FOR FURNACES NIGGERHEAD is displacing smokeless. It is cleaner to handle, beautiful in appearance, and is a much better stoker.

FOR GRATES NIGGERHEAD is displacing Cannel. It makes as hot a fire, burns up cleaner and costs less.

FOR COOK STOVES NIGGERHEAD is considered superior to any other coal mined. Makes less ash and a much better fire.

Price per ton, $6.50. Order today.
